Proportional

In determining whether or not legal expenses are in proportion to the potential benefit of pursuing the insured person's claim, the following will be taken into account:

- whether the likely cost of legal expenses is more than the amount of damages you're able to recover from the other party;
- the value and complexity of the case;
- the geographical location of the policyholder and the other party to the action;
- the stance of the other party;
- whether a reasonable person without legal expenses insurance would pursue the matter and finance their own legal costs.

Reasonable chance of success

There is a 51% or higher chance that the person will win the case and achieve a positive outcome. Examples of a positive outcome are being able to:

- recover the amount of money at stake;
- enforce a judgement;
- obtain an outcome which best serves your interest;
- recover an amount greater than that being offered by the other party.

Appointing a legal representative

We've chosen a panel of legal firms to provide legal services to our customers. There is nothing in our relationship with these firms which affects their ability to act in your best interests.

If Arc accepts your claim, they'll appoint one of our panel of legal representatives on your behalf. You have the right to choose your own legal representative to represent you if it's necessary to take your claim to court or if a conflict of interest happens.

Where you choose to use your own legal representative:

- a. You must not agree to any legal expenses without Arc's prior written permission.
- b. Your legal representative will be appointed to act for you in line with Arc's standard terms of appointment (you can ask us for a copy).
- c. We won't pay for:
 - legal expenses that are unreasonable or not proportional to the expected benefit;
 - legal expenses incurred by your legal representative in avoidable correspondence or which are recoverable from a court, tribunal or other party;
 - any shortfall in costs recovered from another party where the claim has been successful and costs have been recovered;
 - legal expenses in excess of the amount of damages that you're able to recover from the other party.

General conditions - continued

We can do the following:

- pay an amount to settle your claim;
- refuse to pay any further legal costs and expenses if you don't accept any offer in a civil claim, which is reasonable. In assessing whether an offer is reasonable, the likelihood of achieving a higher award and whether the likely cost of continuing the claim is proportional will be considered;
- give your legal representative and/or Arc all information we have about you or your claim including any medical information;
- refuse to pay further legal expenses if your claim doesn't continue to have a reasonable chance of success or the cost of legal expenses is no longer proportional to the expected benefit.

Personal injury claims

As part of any claim for personal injury your legal representative may need to arrange for you to be medically examined by a doctor. They may appoint a medical agency to arrange this examination. The medical agency will consider whether rehabilitation would assist you in recovering from your injury. We do not restrict your legal representative in their choice of medical agency and rehabilitation provider.
